

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become an important employer of people with mental health problems.

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The Department of Health (1996) has published a report on the mental health of public sector employees, which states that 'the mental health of public sector employees is a priority for the Department of Health'. The report also states that 'the Department of Health is committed to improving the mental health of public sector employees'.

The Department of Health has set out a number of objectives for improving the mental health of public sector employees. These objectives are: to reduce the incidence of mental health problems; to improve the early identification and treatment of mental health problems; to improve the support and care of people with mental health problems; and to improve the overall mental health of public sector employees.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of strategies for achieving these objectives. These strategies are: to promote good mental health; to provide early intervention; to provide support and care; and to improve the overall mental health of public sector employees.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of measures for achieving these objectives. These measures are: to provide training and support for public sector employees; to provide access to mental health services; to provide a safe and healthy work environment; and to provide a range of other measures.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of indicators for measuring the success of these measures. These indicators are: the incidence of mental health problems; the early identification and treatment of mental health problems; the support and care of people with mental health problems; and the overall mental health of public sector employees.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of targets for achieving these objectives. These targets are: to reduce the incidence of mental health problems by 10% by 2000; to improve the early identification and treatment of mental health problems by 10% by 2000; to improve the support and care of people with mental health problems by 10% by 2000; and to improve the overall mental health of public sector employees by 10% by 2000.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of measures for achieving these targets. These measures are: to provide training and support for public sector employees; to provide access to mental health services; to provide a safe and healthy work environment; and to provide a range of other measures.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of indicators for measuring the success of these measures. These indicators are: the incidence of mental health problems; the early identification and treatment of mental health problems; the support and care of people with mental health problems; and the overall mental health of public sector employees.

SLEEVE

FRONT EMB

DUPATTA EMB

PATCH

BOTTOM

KIXY FASH
D.NO.1088-0

Top - Georgette heavy embroidered
Inner Bottom - Santoon Silk
Dupatta - Butterfly Net Heavy embroidered

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major provider of social services, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a key factor in the overall growth of the economy.