from pollution, from the quilted gray air hanging over L.A. to the alarming rise in asthma, it can be seriously unpleasant. Now the science shows that pollution is also aging one's skin. "It's in minuscule particles and liquids so tiny that they lodge in pores and destroy skin's natural oils," says a New York dermatologist. "It creates free radicals and leads to collagen breakdown and irritation." These toxins also cause skin treatment products from penetrating. In Hampstead, 80 percent of the world's population lives in areas that exceed World Health Organization guidelines for air pollution.
