

Ruchi
D.NO. 1411-A

Ruchi

Ruchi

D.NO. 1411-E

Ruchi

D.NO. 1411-F

Ruchi

D.NO. 1411-B

Ruchi

D.NO. 1411-A

Ruchi*

BLUEBERRY POSTER D.NO.1411

D.No.1411-A

D.No.1411-B

D.No.1411-C

D.No.1411-D

D.No.1411-E

D.No.1411-F

Ruchi

D.NO. 1411-D

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of children in the world is projected to increase to 2.5 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the world. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is the most widely ratified human rights treaty in the world. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention has been ratified by 112 countries, including all of the member states of the United Nations. The Convention is a legally binding instrument that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.